- 1 1. A formal assessment of the overall health of a classroom (observing what students do) is essential to the process of identifying, assessing, and addressing individual growth and learning needs.
- 2 2. In assessment, the process of focusing the assessment on learning a specific skill or concept helps bring the teacher and students together to address all students.
- 3 3. A child's strengths and weaknesses can be identified through the assessment process.
- 4 4. A single assessment must assess all skills in a particular subject.
- 5 5. The purpose of subjective (or observational) assessment is to assess a child's ability to perform a specific activity.
- 6 6. Formal assessment is influenced by what is being assessed.
- 7 7. Multiple methods are used to collect data for gathering information about student learning.
- 8 8. Informal methods are the easiest tools to use to assess student learning.
- 9 9. Assessment results include information about the assessment process and ability of the student.
- 10 10. A formal assessment should be a standardized instrument.
- 11 11. An observational method for student learning follows a set plan (scripting).
- 12 12. Informal methods may be collected only by teachers, parents, and students.
- 13 13. An observational method requires scripted activities and questions.
- 14 14. A formal assessment for development occurs and takes on a plan of activities.
- 15 15. Using a participatory method requires involvement from all those involved in performance for the student assessment.
- 16 16. Using a participatory method requires involvement from the quality of all involved in the activity (not just subject or students).
- 17 17. A child assessment should be designed to assess what is assessed (purpose).
- 18 18. A formal assessment should be child-specific and developmentally based.
