

Business Email Examples

When working in an office in a company, you will normally have to write emails or letters to customers, work colleagues or suppliers. There are many different reasons why you have to write an email for work (e.g. to ask for something, to say you can't go to something, to complain about something etc...), and for each the email that you send is different in some way (in its structure, what you say and in the vocabulary you use).

To help you know what you have to write when you have to send a business email (or even letter), below you'll find examples of 17 different types of business emails.

You can copy these emails and adapt them for the situation you are writing to somebody. But if you want to learn more about how to write them yourself and what vocabulary you should use when doing it, click on the link below the example of the email to do an online exercise which I have created for each.

A formal email of request

You would use this type of email is used when you write to somebody to ask them for something and they are not expecting the email.

Dear Mr Mitchell,

I am writing in reference to the current situation with the Skipton Airport Project. We have a number of questions which we hope you could answer.

First of all, could you please provide us with an update on where you are on the Skipton Airport Project. We would also appreciate it if you could clarify what the current issues with the delivery systems are, and confirm when you expect them to be resolved.

In addition, at the end of our last meeting we requested a copy of the latest project update report. Unfortunately, we have still not received it. We would appreciate it if you could forward this to us.

Could you also please confirm whether the post-installation support covers the equipment 24 hours a day? And what is actually included in the support? In particular, we would like to have confirmation if the cost of parts and labour are included in the package? We require this information as soon as possible.

And lastly, we are considering extending the period of the post-installation support from your company from 6 months to 12 months. We would be very grateful if you could provide us with a quote for this extension.

I would really appreciate it if you could deal with these matters urgently.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Yours sincerely,

Ian McAdam
Development Manager
