

Problems and prospects of Business Process Outsourcing in Nepal

Niraj Shrestha and Puspa Sharma

The services sector's contribution to many countries' gross domestic product (GDP) and employment has been significant over the years. It has contributed enormously to employment growth, productivity and innovation in most countries.<sup>1</sup> In Nepal, the share of the services sector in the country's GDP was 53 percent in 2000/01, which rose to 57 percent in 2011/12.<sup>2</sup> However, the services sector's contribution to employment in Nepal is not very significant. According to the Nepal Labour Force Survey 2008, only 16.5 percent of the economically active population was employed in the services sector. International trade in services has also gained tremendous importance in the last few decades. According to the latest World Trade Report published by the World Trade Organization (WTO), world exports of commercial services rose by 11 percent to reach US$4,170 billion in 2011, up from the pre-crisis level of US$3,850 billion in 2008. While services trade is significantly important to most of the countries in the world today, it is more so in the case of landlocked developing countries (LLDCs). That is because most services do not require transport and transit facilities for international trade, which most LLDCs sorely lack. This is also corroborated by the fact that the share of services trade income in total income of Nepal increased from 62.4 percent in 2004/05 to 72.6 percent in 2010/11.<sup>3</sup>
