Land Degradation Assessment and Management R. S. Dwivedi,2018-10-17 The constant growth of the world s population and the decline of the availability of land and soil resources are global concerns for food security Other concerns are the decrease in productivity and delivery of essential ecosystems services because of the decline of soil quality and health by a range of degradation processes Key soil properties like soil bulk density organic carbon concentration plant available water capacity infiltration rate air porosity at field moisture capacity and nutrient reserves are crucial properties for soil functionality which refers to the capacity of soil to perform numerous functions These functions are difficult to measure directly and are estimated through indices of soil quality and soil health Soil degradation its extent and severity can also be estimated by assessing indices of soil quality and health Geospatial Technology for Land Degradation Assessment and Management uses satellite imagery and remote sensing technologies to measure landscape parameters and terrain attributes Remote sensing and geospatial technologies are important tools in assessing the extent and the severity of land and soil degradation their temporal changes and geospatial distribution in a timely and cost effective manner The knowledge presented in the book by Dr R S Dwivedi shows how remote sensing data can be utilized for inventorying assessing and monitoring affected ecosystems and how this information can be integrated in the models of different local settings Through many land degradations studies land managers researchers and policymakers will find practical applications of geospatial technologies and future challenges The information presented is also relevant to advancing the Sustainable Development

Some studies have shown however that there is potential interest and acceptability of tools that support various vehicles rationales objectives and formats These tools include traditional games e g chess games popular electronic games board games computer based interventions specifically designed for psychotherapy or cognitive training virtual reality apps for smartphones and so forth Computers and games may offer a true opportunity to develop assess and disseminate new prevention and treatment tools for mental health and well being Currently there is a strong need for state of the art information to answer questions such as the following Why develop such tools for mental health and well being What are the potential additions to traditional treatments What are the best strategies or formats to improve the possible impact of these tools Are such tools useful as a first treatment step What is the potential of a hybrid model of care that combines traditional approaches with games and or computers as tools What games and applications have already been designed and studied What is the evidence from previous studies How can such tools be successfully designed for mental health and well being What is rewarding or attractive for patients in using such treatments What are the worldwide developments in the field Are some protocols under development What are the barriers and challenges related to such developments How can these tools be assessed and how can the way that they work and for whom be measured Are the potential benefits of such products specific or can these additions be attributed to nonspecific factors What are the users views on such tools What are the possible links between such tools and social networks Is there a gap between evidence based results and market development Are there any quality challenges What future developments and studies are needed in the field Author
