typos from the publisher Not indexed Not illustrated 1899 edition Excerpt CHAPTER IX METHOD OF EXAMINATION We have now passed through the theoretical portion of our subject and this brings us to the practical part The foregoing chapters have been devoted to theory so called while the remaining chapters will treat of practice or in other words the balance of the work will show how to put into practical use what was learned in the former chapters We have treated with considerable attention to detail the theoretical subjects embraced in this treatise To many opticians these matters may have seemed dry and uninteresting and perhaps some may have even thought them unimportant but they are the necessary foundation deeply and securely laid without which the lasting superstructure of a successful optician cannot be builded That is to say and the statement cannot be made too strong no optician can make a reputation for himself and build up a growing optical business unless he is grounded in the scientific principles of his profession Otherwise where is he better than the country storekeeper who sells glasses or the itinerant peddler Otherwise why should he claim the title of optician An optician is really a person skilled in the science of optics and this is the original meaning of the word but in later years the significance of the word has been changed and the title assumed by any dealer who keeps for sale a stock of spectacles and eye glasses however small This should not be but only those persons should be called opticians who have had special training and acquired special knowledge and skill and no reader of this work should content himself until he has measured up to this standard The science of the examination of the eye in a healthy and diseased condition is of recent The how Book Albert
