

HOME OF THE ASHFALL

JOHN JACK WIGLEY

The eruption of Mount Pinatubo was recorded as the second largest terrestrial eruption of the 20th century, and the largest eruption population area. Ash fall, which formed a weighty, rain-drenched snow-like film, affected almost the entire island of Luzon, and even reached the neighboring countries of Malaysia and Vietnam. It was further aggravated because of Typhoon Yunya, which brought with it heavy rains and strong winds. To the Kampampagans and to the people affected by this tragedy, it would serve as a testament to their impossible attribute of sung about their plight and predicament.

I was no longer living in Angeles City when Mt. Pinatubo erupted on June 15, 1991. I was promoted from being a crew member at Pizza Hut Dav to management trainee at Pizza Hut Haysan Plaza in December 1990. After being a service crew member for more than four years and graduating from college in 1989, I had to say goodbye to my hometown where I lived for more than two decades. It was my first time to work in Manila. I asked the assistance of Ed Calupitan, a fellow Pizza Hut Dav crew member now based in Manila, to help me find a place to stay. He was living in a two-bedroom apartment and gladly offered the other room to me.

Weeks before the eruption, I read several news and warnings about Mt. Pinatubo. Frankly, I never knew that there was a volcano in the Zambales mountain range. Nobody among my Kapampangan friends did. I guess we were all clueless about the impending danger this would cause in our lives. Later on, I realized that the summit of the volcano was just fourteen kilometres away from the extent of Clark Air Base. I thought that volcanoes were conspicuous mountains and had fierce-looking summits like Mayon's and Halsey's. But this one was deeply hidden among the several mountains called the Cabusitan mountains of Zambales. How a volcano had managed to hide among the mountains and be covered with a defence forest was something I couldn't comprehend. If it was bound to erupt, I guess it would be just like a firecracker.

Hell, I thought that if there was a mountain near us which I imagined would erupt anytime, it would be the Arayat, which was located at the heart of Pampanga, with its open mouth and forbidding countenance. Not this obscure mountain whose native inhabitants, the Aetas, never even knew about, I paid no more attention to warnings.

I had only been in Manila for barely six months and was enjoying my new-found independence. I would sometimes go to Angeles City to see Mother during days off, which usually fell on a weekday, since management people did not have the luxury of the day-off during weekends because it was the time when more people would go out and eat. Pizza Hut Haysan Plaza was a high volume unit.

That fateful day, after my opening shift, I went to see a film. It was "Hihintayin Kita sa Langit" - a film adaption of Bronte's "Wuthering Heights" directed by Carlos Siguera Reyna. The film starred erstwhile loves played by Richard Gomez and Dawn Zulueta. I was feeling all mushy and melodramatic after watching the film when, once outside, I saw parked cars covered with what seemed like a whitish-gray blanket. And so were the streets. Is it finally snowing in Manila? I thought, as I felt some of the particles in my hand and smudge my shirt. When I looked closely and touched them, they were grainy. It was like ash from an ashtray.

I saw farther down the riverbank that people were lining up to cross the river by stepping on coconut trunks and wooden poles attached from one end to the other. The gaunt shirtless beed who was juggling coins and walking to and fro shouted "Peso! nu. Deng bisang lumakad papunta Angeles, bini na kare bang al la mabasa deng bitts yu. For one peso, take this trail and your feet won't get wet in the river". I was about to fall in line but I realized that these as a long queue of people already as far as the bend, waiting for their turn to get across the river.

It would take me forever to get to other side if I fall in line, I thought. I talked to the person behind me. "Matalamya puing daanum. Is the water deep?"

"Tabaldy. Bala mu, matalam pin. I don't know. It's deep. I guess." he immediately rejoined. "Lowen me itang tau angga na keng atyan na. Look at the guy crossing. The water's up to his tummy." he said, pointing to the man.

It was deep. I contemplated. I didn't want to take the risk of getting my clothes wet. I was also thinking that perhaps the water that flowed down the river was contaminated because of the volcanic ash and the sulphuric content of the water.

Just I saw about four barker holding wooden chairs, inviting people to cross the river on these chairs. They explained that people would be sitting on the chair and the barker themselves would carry the chair to the other side for a fee of ten pesos. Despite the horrible sight before me, I forced a smile. I was thinking about how indestructible humans are. These people were still struggling to live even if catastrophes like typhoons and volcanic eruptions had struck. Catastrophes constantly plagued their lives. I felt deep admiration for them. One barker thought my smile was an indication that I wanted to ride in the chair. "Bisa kang sake. Would you like to take a ride?" he asked.

I was meaning to say no but I was speechless, still talking everything in. Besides, I wanted to see my family. I nodded my head.

"Keya, paglagdag naku mu beka na. Kasi lpa kang mabayat. I'll charge you extra. You look heavy" the barker smiled fully, revealing he had no teeth.

For a moment, I wanted to pull his hair and drown his head in the river. His impudent one, I thought. He had to subtly insult my chubby body. But I surmised that he meant well.
