

THE RAINMAKER

FADE IN:

1. LONG SHOT - A WESTERN STREET - (NIGHT)

A typical western thoroughfare on a hot night in August. The street is unpaved and dusty. In the moonlight we glimpse the dark store fronts and at the far end of the street, HOPPY'S SALOON. In the middle of the thoroughfare, outside the SALOON, a crowd has gathered. Torches have been affixed to the upright members of an open wagon, making it a sort of theatrical stage. As we move closer we see the audience -- mostly men, a few women, a number of kids trying to push their way up front to get a better view of the wagon and speaker. The wagon is a thing of magic. By the flaming torches we see a huge bass drum, a shining bugle, a brilliantly colored phrenology chart and an enormous globe of the world. Draped over one of the uprights of the wagon, a silken dressing gown spectacularly decorated with the signs of the Zodiac. And most conspicuous of all, a huge contraption, wheels within wheels, gadgets, gears, pennants, gaudily painted. It is an ordinary coffee grinder with all the jimcrackery imposed upon it to make it look like something it is not -- a thing of romance and general enchantment...Now for a look at the pitchman himself. His name is BILL STARBUCK. He is all mercury, all magic. His pants are breath-tight. His spurs are silver, so is his belt. His leather wrist bands glint with silver and jewels that are as real as you think they are. Starbuck is holding up a ten-foot rod that looks like a fishing pole. At the end of it flies a brightly-colored pinwheel, such as a child would carry at the end of a short stick. The crowd is enthralled by his harangue:

STARBUCK

Now I say to you -- I tell you -- a tornado, I say a tornado -- that's a turr-i-ble, turr-i-ble thing! Saw a pretty little town in Idaho -- pretty and green and the grass looked like it would live forever! Saw that same town the same night -- after a tornado blew through that place -- and there wasn't a blade of grass or one tired little buttercup! And everybody gone! The men ran north and the women ran south -- the dogs ran east and the cats ran west! Nobody left in that town but a little boy, calling down the main street, "Bowser!" He was callin' for his dog. "Bowser, where's my little dog Bowser?" Hello tornado -- goodbye town!
