Gilhool, 2013-06-24. Jennifer leaped at the opportunity to take her career to the next level. The Salt Mine was growing in Asia Pacific Africa. It needed leaders from the home office in the States to move to China and pull together a cohesive team that could deliver the results the Board of Directors, shareholders, and analysts expected. It was an opportunity to build a team from the ground up, a chance to be the first director in Asia Pacific for her functional organization and one of only three women in leadership roles there. She knew the work would be hard. She would have to put in long hours, travel across the region, be away from her three children and husband for days or weeks at a time. It would be worth the sacrifice, not only for her career but for the opportunity to take her children to China and across Southeast Asia. A once-in-a-lifetime experience for all of them from the challenge of living in a new and very different country to traveling through Malaysian rain forests, Cambodian and Thai temples, and across China itself. But she had not anticipated that it would cost her almost everything: her relationships with her children, her sense of self, and at times, her sanity. This first-hand account of journeying into corporate leadership gives readers a unique look inside the real life of an ambitious career woman who leaned in and tried to grasp the brass ring. As Jennifer discovered, not every brass ring is worth reaching for. Lean In Sheryl Sandberg, 2014-04-10.
