ABSTRACT

The study in it is a comprehensive investigation to identify the important writing tasks, major areas of difficulty in academic writing, the factors causing these difficulties and the corrective measures in the Saudi EFL academic context. It attempted to identify gender-based differences for the above-mentioned factors and the results of independent-samples t-test did not show major differences in the perceptions of both the groups partially accepting the null hypothesis. Several research studies were reviewed and a 40-item Likert-scale agree-disagree questionnaire was developed by the researcher. It was translated into Arabic and piloted before it was administered to 204 Saudi EFL learners (108 male & 96 female) studying at Taif University. Descriptive analyses and independent-samples t-test were run using SPSS version 17. The findings reported that these particular Saudi EFL learners face serious problems in their academic writing due to their weaknesses in using appropriate lexical items, organization of ideas and grammar. The other weaker areas include wrong use of prepositions, spellings, irregular verbs, articles, punctuation, suffixes and prefixes. It is recommended to implement a stricter admission policy, increase language courses, develop tailor-made activities, provide increased practice in academic writing, explicit modern teaching techniques and equip the classrooms with modern teaching aids to improve Saudi EFL learners' academic writing.

Field of Research: Academic Writing, Perception, Syncretic Theory, Gender

1. Introduction

Because of the English language being a storehouse of world knowledge, it has been chosen as the medium of instruction for higher studies in general in many regions of the world including the Gulf countries and, of course, the English language teaching in particular (Crystal, 2000).

When it comes to the teaching and learning of language skills, writing comes at the end according to the natural order hypothesis of language learning, but this does not make writing skill insignificant. Rather, its significance increases manifold in the academic contexts in which students are required to apply this skill as a main tool to show what they have learnt. A growing mass of research has offered valuable insights into the significance of this skill for academic success. Bjork and Nilsson (1997, p. 8) argue that

We highlight the importance of writing in all university curricula not only because of its immediate practical application, i.e. as an isolated skill or ability, but because we believe that, seen from a broader perspective,
