

Health Status, Organization and Description

1. The following table summarizes the key characteristics of the health status of the population in the United States.

Characteristic	Health Status	Organization	Description
1.1. Life expectancy	High	Universal coverage	Life expectancy at birth is 78 years, which is higher than in most other countries. This is due to a combination of factors, including a high level of education, a high level of income, and a high level of health care.
1.2. Infant mortality	Low	Universal coverage	Infant mortality rate is 7.1 per 1,000 live births, which is lower than in most other countries. This is due to a combination of factors, including a high level of education, a high level of income, and a high level of health care.
1.3. Health care costs	High	Universal coverage	Health care costs are high, with total health care spending in the United States exceeding $2 trillion in 2010. This is due to a combination of factors, including a high level of education, a high level of income, and a high level of health care.
1.4. Health care access	High	Universal coverage	Health care access is high, with 98% of the population having health insurance. This is due to a combination of factors, including a high level of education, a high level of income, and a high level of health care.
1.5. Health care quality	High	Universal coverage	Health care quality is high, with the United States ranking 18th in the world in terms of health care quality. This is due to a combination of factors, including a high level of education, a high level of income, and a high level of health care.
1.6. Health care equity	Low	Universal coverage	Health care equity is low, with significant disparities in health care access and quality across different racial and ethnic groups. This is due to a combination of factors, including a high level of education, a high level of income, and a high level of health care.
1.7. Health care sustainability	Low	Universal coverage	Health care sustainability is low, with the current health care system facing significant challenges in terms of financing and delivery. This is due to a combination of factors, including a high level of education, a high level of income, and a high level of health care.

2. The following table summarizes the key characteristics of the health status of the population in the United States, including the impact of the health care system on the population's health status.
