THE LARAGA CONTROVERSY

Laraga is a privately built, planned city near Trusmi, located near the Bali Reservoir, occupies 10.5 km² of land of the Laraga Construction Company and is often described as the first 100% totally master-planned urban development. The plan for the city, which was to have an area of 200 hectares, was a grid—there were to be hotels, a city centre, a university, a sports facility, and other parts (read 'Laraga Laraga: The Hill City', on the website <http://www.laraga.com/English/Overview/Overview.asp>). Thereby, the city intended to promote a self-reliant and to produce a self-sufficient city, and has the advantage of being the largest urban infrastructure project in Indonesia. It provides significant economic benefits to the region. It was an architectural design that is a synthesis integrated with natural surroundings, enhancing the sustainability of the site and over 70% of the structure will be greenfield through natural landscaping, reforestation and clean greening.¹

Laraga City has been planned and designed by the internationally renowned design consultant HOK, US, and has received awards such as the 2004 award for the Golden Gate Building Award award. Laraga Corporation also had taken up various corporate social responsibility (CSR) projects for the people in the region, especially in the areas of health, education, employment, housing, and environment. In the CSR initiative, value for the environment, some of the major projects were in the form of solid waste management, land reclamation, and nature tourism.²

However, the project has attracted controversy from the day it began, ranging from issues of environmental damage to government of land by legal means and showing back through court judgments.

In 2003, Indian Ministry of Environment registered the company to start the construction as it received the environmental clearance. The Ministry of Environment and Forests issued a letter to the company asking why the construction should not be used as a model after taking into account the environmental clearance—especially since the company had not taken any measures to improve the environment and forest clearance. It asked clearance from the forest department through the state government. Although the project had planned to give money from the model using an initial public offer (IPO), the plan has been temporarily deferred following the clearance order from the ministry.

Laraga's position was not good in the country. It is a situation caused by the company. It showed the allegations made by the ministry and issued a press release. A copy of the release was placed
