Abstract

This study aims to determine the development of research around investment risk in Islamic and Conventional Financial Institutions. The research was conducted from 1995 to 2022, by searching national and international journals indexed by Google Scholar, Scopus, and Scopus via the Perish/Harzing application, with the keyword "Investment Risk". Based on the search results, there were 280 research articles, then inputted into the VOSviewer application and analyzed descriptively through a literature review study. The results showed that the number of publications had increased significantly every year. Furthermore, based on the results detected using the VOSviewer application, research related to investment risk is divided into 16 clusters and 116 items. Meanwhile, based on the results of a literature review study, there are 9 main themes related to investment risk in Islamic and Conventional Financial Institutions.

INTRODUCTION

Risk management in banking has improved in line with developments in the financial industry as a whole. In recent years, banks have begun to understand the importance of risk management to maintain business stability and continuity. This can be seen from the existence of regulations from the Financial Services Authority (OJK) which regulate risk exposure management and effective corporate governance. Risks in the financial sector must be recognized and controlled by estimating the potential that may occur in the future, not after the risk has already occurred. Therefore, a methodology for modeling risks that may occur in the future is very important so that those making decisions can prepare strategies to overcome future risks. One of the risks that occur in the financial industry is investment risk. Investment risk management involves identifying, assessing, controlling and monitoring these risks over time to ensure that the bank remains stable and maintains its reputation.

In previous research, the development of investment risk in banking can be influenced by several factors, such as changes in interest rates, financial market fluctuations, changes in regulations, and macroeconomic conditions. Banks can also take proactive steps to reduce risk, such as diversifying investment portfolios or implementing technology to monitor risk in real-time. Banks must also ensure that their investments meet regulatory requirements and have a risk level that is appropriate to the bank's risk profile. Banks must also consider environmental and social implications in managing investment risks. This relates to the principles of social and environmental responsibility

Investment Risk In Islamic Banking Journal:

Islamic Banking and Finance Munawar Iqbal, David T. Llewellyn, 2002-01-01 It is a well known fact that conventional commercial banks provide financial intermediation services on the basis of interest rates on assets and liabilities. However, since interest is prohibited in Islam, Islamic banks have developed several other modes through which savings are mobilized and passed on to entrepreneurs, none of which involve interest. Islamic Banking and Finance discusses Islamic financial theory and practice and focuses on the opportunities offered by Islamic finance as an alternative method of financial intermediation. Key features of profit sharing as opposed to debt-based contracts are highlighted, and the ways in which they can facilitate improved efficiency and stability of a financial system are explored. The authors illustrate that, in addition to some 200 Islamic banks operating in Muslim as well as non-Muslim countries, some of the biggest multinational banks are now offering Islamic financial products. This book will fascinate students, researchers, and academics with a special interest in comparative banking, middle eastern studies, and international finance, and will also appeal to practitioners of banking and finance.

The Future of Islamic Banking and Finance in Indonesia Romi Adetio Setiawan, 2023-07-20 Sharia compliance is the raison d'être of Islamic banks. All of their instruments and activities should be based on sharia principles, which unfortunately exposes them to greater risks than their conventional counterparts regulated under the dual banking system in Indonesia. These include inconsistencies between fatwas, unique reputational risks, and inefficiencies in the regulatory framework governing Islamic banks. This book critically examines the less studied issue of developing an Islamic banking regulatory and supervisory framework that considers the risk pressures faced by Islamic banks' operations in an Indonesian financial sector dominated by conventional banks. The book assesses the extent to which the global financial standards of the Basel Accords have been followed by Islamic Banks in Indonesia with respect to their regulation, supervision, and risk management, to highlight the unresolved tensions in the multiple regulatory and supervisory institutions. The book proposes a middle ground approach that accommodates modification of the existing financial regulatory and supervisory system in line with international best practice. The reforms proposed in this book offer a way for financial regulatory and supervisory agencies to further develop modern Islamic law and finance. The book will be a valuable resource for scholars and policymakers interested in the dual banking system in Indonesia.
