

AP® ENGLISH LITERATURE AND COMPOSITION
2016 SCORING GUIDELINES

Question 2: Thomas Hardy, "The Mayor of Casterbridge"

The items should reflect the quality of the essay as a whole — its content, style, and mechanics. Reveal the student's best work, not their best score. The student has no responsibility to cite evidence from the text; the goal is to show the student's interpretive voice. It is not necessary to quote evidence using the correct page(s) from the text.

5-4 This essay offers a persuasive assessment of Hardy's portrayal of the complex relationship between the two characters, Michael Henchard and his neighbor, Elizabeth-Jane. The student makes a strong case for their complexity of the complex relationship between the two characters. They use specific evidence from the text, such as their words and actions, and they discuss the text through an apt specific interpretive lens. While these essays may not be flawless, they demonstrate evidence of reading that is thoughtful and effectively organized. Essays receive a 4 based on a significant analysis and clear effective use of evidence from the text (lines 1-12).

5-3 This essay offers a reasonable analysis of Hardy's portrayal of the complex relationship between the two characters. The student provides evidence, sometimes quoting of the passage, with attention to appropriateness to the text, such as their words and actions. Some essays may not be great but still use their complexity of the relationship between the two characters, the student presents their ideas with nearly equal attention paid to the text as support. Essays receive a 3 based on a significant analysis and clear, somewhat less successful use of the evidence of the complex relationship between the two characters (lines 1-12).

5 This essay focuses on the complex text with a student's reading of the passage, but tends to be superficial as they discuss evidence of Hardy's portrayal of the complex relationship between the two characters. While discussing some aspects of the passage, student's support, the discussion of their relationship between the two characters and their contribution to the portrait of the complex relationship may be weak, and support from the passage may not connect sufficiently to paragraphs. While these essays demonstrate adequate control of language, their essays may be marked by surface errors. These essays are not as well organized, supported, or developed as 4-3 essays.

4-2 This essay addresses the text to offer an interpretive analysis of the passage. The student may be partial, oversimplifying, or confused. The student may quote the passage at the beginning, middle, or end of the discussion of the use of evidence to identify the relationship. These essays may be characterized by an emphasis on repetition, presentation of ideas, an absence of textual support, or an overstatement of scope. Essays receive a 2 based on a significant analysis and clear writing.

4-1 This essay concerns the complexity of the passage in the 4-3 page. They may occasionally mention the passage in an oversimplified way. They may discuss narrative events that identify with relationships. Although some attempt to focus on the passage, the student's ideas are presented with little direct support from the passage. Essays receive a 1 based on a limited discussion of the passage.

3 This essay gives a response that is completely off topic or uninterpretable. Some may be more useful as a starting point for further reflection on the text.

— This response is entirely blank.
