

AWWA C906-15

New Standard, New Opportunities

The passage of American Water Works Association (AWWA) C906-15 on Sept. 8 is greeted by the polyethylene pipe industry. It's a testament not only to the fact there are significant benefits to the new standard but also to important new opportunities.

Here are some of the main highlights of AWWA C906-15:

- Lowest pipe cost: For new piping systems, there is very little equipment, so the focus on water transmission continues to grow. Used-CPE (resin) guarantees a clear line application to system owners and designers from the start of the project through the life of the pipeline.
- The standard now covers all sizes from 4" through 84" diameter pipe. Previously the standard only covered through 36" pipe.
- The standard improves the performance capabilities of the current high-performance polyethylene resin. Many of the performance properties of these resins are orders of magnitude greater than previous resins. By meeting by these performance properties, you will have confidence in a safety factor that's greater than or equal to 2.
- Based on these properties, this revision allows the use of a larger internal diameter (ID) pipe. Although the same pressure class and outside diameter (OD) competing pipe materials. For example, previously a 12" ID 15 pipe was rated at 100 psi. Under the new rules, a 12" ID 15 pipe made to C906-15 is rated at the same 100 psi. The larger internal diameter means increased flow capacity of the pipe making CPE pipe more competitive with other resins.
- Consistently by engineering the same OD, the pressure rating for 12" ID 15 pipe made to C906-15 will now have a 20% increase.

Details written about the recognition of the pipe industry's contribution to the new infrastructure will be required to get up a pipe that will have the ability to use better and pipe with a higher flow rate. This change will be changing fast for the 150 industry because many municipalities require PE pipe, while other competing pipe materials, to be replaced. This is because CPE has a distribution network that includes agencies and existing contracts for the water industry. Without the requirements for a higher pipe, PE can continue to thrive on its many advantages. There is no other pipe material out there that can deliver a cost-effective alternative to a solid, long-term, increasingly scarce of the superior and economic infrastructure. It's a huge selling point.

C906-15 was published in the August issue of the www.awwa.org and was introduced Sept. 8, 2015. There's a lot more information about this article about the new standard.
