Abstract

The primary aim of endodontic therapy is the long-term retention of a functional tooth by preventing or treating apical periodontitis. However, the outcome of the endodontic treatment is multifactorial such as the quality of the restoration and structural integrity of the tooth after root canal preparation. Dentists need to reassess and recalibrate the endodontic and restorative techniques to best suit the way that they practice today. At the same time, need to preserve essential tooth structure to routinely achieve a 50-year, not a 5-year, successful outcome. Contemporary research efforts are currently directed to better understanding dentin behavior and structure during aging and function. An alternative approach is to minimize structural changes during root canal therapy, which may result in a new strategy that can be labeled "minimally invasive endodontics (MIE)." MIE is desirable in the interest of the patient, and preserving tooth structure requires optical magnification aids (surgical microscope), ultrasonic-assisted preparation techniques, modern file systems, and in-depth knowledge of the tooth and root canal anatomy.

In the context of current endodontic development, for proper cleaning and shaping, for promoting the long-term health of supporting structure of a tooth well shape canal is needed.

Minimally invasive endodontics (MIE) is a concept of maximum preserve the healthy coronal, cervical and radicular tooth structure during the endodontic treatment. For success, the dentist must aware between conservation and elimination of tooth structure during endodontic procedure to fulfill the endodontic goals.

Dr. Herb Schilder, in 1974, precisely described the mechanical objectives for the preparation of a canal that, when filled, would ensure the biological goals for long-term success. However, these objectives were published way before any proposal of the most contemporary concepts of minimally invasive dentistry and, more recently, MIE.

Predictability of success in endodontics is currently hie on preparing the access cavity shaping, cleaning, and filling root canal systems. Going forward, the question that should be scientifically answered is, how conservatively can be prepared any given access cavity or root canal, and most importantly - still enable the root canal system to be both 3C cleaned and filled? Until, this question is answered by collaborative research, it would be better to continue to practice utilizing the most proven treatment concepts and techniques. There is an old saying, "Model success. Success leaves clues" Long-term endodontic treatment success must integrate respect for the concept of MIE while fulfilling treatment objectives by mechanically and biologically

MIE refers to the minimally removal of dentin during the all three phases of a root canal procedure: (1) Coronal access preparation; (2) radicular apical preparation; and (3) flaring of the canal that connects the coronal to the apical preparations.¹ To achieve these dental surgeons must develop new skills and dexterity
