TIPS FOR GOOD SLEEP HYGIENE

SET A BED AND WAKE TIME

Your body craves routines. Set a general bed and wake time and stick to them... even on the weekends. Sleeping in throws your body out of sync and makes it more difficult to sleep the next night.

MANAGE THE LIGHT

Light affects your body's natural circadian rhythm. Sunlight during the day helps wake you up and start your internal clock. Artificial light from your smartphone in the evening can keep you from producing melatonin, keeping you awake. So turn it off!

SLEEP & SEX ONLY

Your bedroom should be your retreat. Not your office. Not your media room. Use your bedroom only for having sex or going to sleep. And for the best results, use it for both in succession, as sex can actually lead to better sleep.

ARRANGE YOUR BEDROOM

Clutter tends to lead to anxiety, which is detrimental to sleep. Spend some time cleaning up and decluttering your bedroom. Invest in soft bedding, a comfortable pillow, and a high-quality mattress that fits your sleep style.

MAKE A LIST

Can't turn your brain off? Before trying to go to sleep, put pen to paper and make a list of all your to-do's. This will help you offload worries, get to sleep easier, and start your next day more productively.

START A NEW RITUAL

Create a bedtime routine that begins about an hour before bedtime. Dim the lights to help simulate the sun setting. Find an activity to help you relax like yoga, meditation, or sipping hot tea. Enjoy!
