

Acidity of Beverages Lab

Introduction: Common beverages may be either acidic or basic. Fruit juices, for example, get their sweet taste from sugars and their sour or tart taste from weak acids such as citric acid. If the juice contains too much sugar, it will taste bland, but too much acid and the juice will taste sour. The concentration of acids in various consumer beverages may be determined by titration with sodium hydroxide.

Background: The main acids present in fruits and fruit juices are citric acid (in citrus fruits), tartaric acid (in grapes), and malic acid (in apples). All of these are characterized as weak acids.

The amount of citric acid in citrus fruit juices can be determined by titration with a standard solution of sodium hydroxide. A standard solution is one whose concentration is accurately known, usually to three significant figures. Citric acid is a tricarboxylic acid—it has three ionizable or “active” hydrogen atoms in its structure. One mole of citric acid therefore reacts with three moles of sodium hydroxide via the acid-base neutralization reaction shown in Equation 1.

Acid-base titrations are an extremely useful technique to determine the concentration of an acid or base in a sample. In titrating beverages such as orange juice, apple juice, and sodas that contain weak acids, the juice is called the analyte and a strong base is used as the titrant.

In the titration procedure, a sodium hydroxide solution of known molarity is carefully added using a buret to a measured volume of fruit juice containing an indicator. The exact volume of sodium hydroxide that must be added to reach the indicator endpoint is measured and then used to calculate the concentration of citric acid in the juice.

A sample setup for a titration is shown in Figure 2 on the next page, where a buret containing the titrant is clamped to the support stand and a beaker or flask containing the analyte is set on a stir plate. If a pH probe is inserted into the solution, a titration curve can be constructed by plotting the pH of the solution on the y-axis versus the volume of titrant added on the x-axis. The shape of the titration curve may be used to distinguish strong and weak acids in the analyte, and also permits graphical analysis of the equivalence point. At the equivalence point, moles of added titrant are stoichiometrically related to moles of analyte in the sample.
