

Preventing Adolescent Health-Risk Behaviors by Strengthening Protection During Childhood

J. David Hawkins, PhD; Richard F. Catalano, PhD; Rick Kosterman, PhD; Robert Abbott, PhD; Karl G. Hill, PhD

Objective: To examine the long-term effects of an intervention combining teacher training, parent education, and social competence training for children during the elementary grades on adolescent health-risk behaviors at age 18 years.

Design: Nonrandomized controlled trial with follow-up 6 years after intervention.

Setting: Public elementary schools serving high-crime areas in Seattle, Wash.

Participants: Of the fifth-grade students enrolled in participating schools, 643 (76%) were given written parental consent for the longitudinal study and 598 (93%) were followed up and interviewed at age 18 years.

Interventions: A full intervention provided in grades 1 through 6 of 5 days of in-service training for teachers each intervention year, developmentally appropriate parenting classes offered to parents when children were in grades 1 through 3 and 5 through 6, and developmentally adjusted social competence training for children in grades 1 and 6. A late intervention, provided in grades 5 and 6 only, paralleled the full intervention at these grades.

Main Outcome Measures: Self-reported violent and nonviolent crime, substance use, sexual activity, pregnancy, bonding to school, school achievement, grade repetition and school dropout, suspension and/or expulsion, and school misbehavior; delinquency charges from court records; grade point average; California Achievement Test scores; and disciplinary action reports from school records.

Results: Fewer students receiving full intervention than control students reported violent delinquency acts (48.3% vs 59.7%;  $P=.04$ ), heavy drinking (15.4% vs 25.6%;  $P=.04$ ), sexual intercourse (72.1% vs 83.0%;  $P=.02$ ), having multiple sex partners (49.7% vs 61.5%;  $P=.04$ ), and pregnancy or causing pregnancy (17.1% vs 26.4%;  $P=.06$ ) by age 18 years. The full intervention student group reported more commitment ( $P=.03$ ) and attachment ( $P=.006$ ) to school, better academic achievement ( $P=.01$ ), and less school misbehavior ( $P=.02$ ) than control students. Late intervention in grades 5 and 6 only did not significantly affect health-risk behaviors in adolescence.

Conclusions: A package of interventions with teachers, parents, and children provided throughout the elementary grades can have enduring effects in reducing violent behavior, heavy drinking, and sexual intercourse by age 18 years among multiethnic urban children. Results are consistent with the theoretical model guiding the intervention and support efforts to reduce health-risk behaviors through universal interventions in selected communities or schools serving high-crime neighborhoods.

Editor's Note: I think the message here is, "Start early, include everyone possible, and [I'd add] don't ever stop."

AS THE COSTS of crime, teen pregnancies, an undereducated underclass in poverty, and substance abuse have increased, policymakers and researchers have looked more seriously at prevention as a potentially cost-effective approach to reduce the prevalence of these behaviors.<sup>1</sup> Efforts to improve schools, reduce crime and violence, combat substance abuse, and prevent unwanted pregnancies have progressed on separate tracks.

Advances in prevention in public health<sup>2</sup> provide a model for prevention of adolescent health-risk behaviors by focusing on risk and protective factors predictive of these behaviors.<sup>3,4</sup> Research on the predictors of school failure, delinquency, drug abuse, teen pregnancy, and violence indicates that many of the same factors predict these different outcomes.<sup>5,6</sup> Recent research has shown that bonding to school and family protects against a broad range of health-risk behaviors in adoles-
