

What is the purpose of setting `WU_AUTO_UPDATES=1` on a system?

- To install system updates during the boot of a system.
- To install updates in the system software itself during a system boot.
- To enable the system manager to install system updates whenever they become available.
- To enable system to automatically install the latest updates whenever new system updates become available.
- To enable system to install system updates and the latest BIOS whenever they become available.

Your answer is incorrect.

Correct answer:

Typical the system updates to automatically install updates as they become available, not

- at next update (WU_AUTO_UPDATES=1)
- in place of the above install updates command or not "automatic" is just a yes
- WU_AUTO_UPDATES=1 after installation.

Note: Automatic updates

You can configure your system to automatically install updates as they become available. To enable automatic, set `WU_AUTO_UPDATES=1` in your `/etc/sysconfig/updates` or your `/etc/sysconfig/updates` file during installation.

Automatic is our most popular configuration. It is a reliable way to ensure that updates get installed quickly as they become available, regardless of when they are released.

Please note that enabling automatic does not mean the system itself is automatically updated. You will be notified via a mail when a new system itself is available, and it can be upgraded through your package manager.
