

Aidi PESTEL Analysis

Political

- Maintenance of authoritarian political independence across the globe, especially through the development of long-term relations with key US institutions based on their security-alliance system. The majority of Aidi assets are distributed through US and other major US-UK, bilateral institutions, which are perceived as more independent from international political forces or other geopolitical interests in the world. (Aidi 2019)
- After 2008, major international firms (for example, Microsoft, Google, Amazon, etc.) have been able to enter the market in Europe through direct investment and US-UK, and their investment has increased as well as the number of subsidiaries in Europe. However, Europe's market size, regulatory and political uncertainty (especially UK post-Brexit) significantly reduce effective international investment for multinational companies in Europe. It is more difficult to enter UK markets (Germany, etc.).

Economic

- Investment in the US, which has been able to bring in a limited number of companies. The two countries include various institutional investors or international investing groups, providing opportunities for investment growth, as a result of price fluctuations. International firms through the US and Europe, especially those being funded through Aidi 2019.
- Investment that provides the ability to enter the market, especially those of the major market players, including those who have been able to expand their market for international growth over the past few years. (Aidi 2019). There are still a number of international firms that have been able to enter the market by entering the international market.
- The overall growth rate has generally remained low in the US and UK, but it has increased over the past few years. The market is generally stable, and there are many international firms in the market. There are still a number of international firms that have been able to enter the market through Aidi 2019.
- The flow of investment from the international market and the flow of investment from the market to the market is still a significant part of the market. There are still a number of international firms that have been able to enter the market through Aidi 2019.
