Summary of Charles Duhigg's The Power of Habit: Why We Do What We Do in Life and Business. Our life is a collection of practical, intellectual, and emotional habits. The most powerful factor in developing belief in transformation is the will to believe. Habits permit us to begin something with difficulty initially; in time, it becomes easier. With enough practice, we start doing it somehow mechanically or with almost no consciousness. When you believe in change and turn it into a habit, the change will become reality. The power of habit is that we can select our habits. When we make that choice, it becomes automatic and moves toward being unavoidable. It ultimately takes us toward our destiny. This summary is for everyone. It tells us that our life is a direct result of our habits. We can change our life by changing our habits. Even if we start with just one thing, it can leave a powerful impact on the other areas of our life as well. We have the reins of our destiny by improving our ways. The summary offers a detailed yet concise version of the core lessons of the book. You can benefit immensely from it.
