

CONSTITUENCY OFFICES

WHAT ARE CONSTITUENCY OFFICES AND WHAT SERVICES DO THEY OFFER?

The Parliamentary programme consists of two main components: parliamentary sessions & constituency periods. MPs use constituency periods to attend to the public & solve problems in communities where they have been assigned to assist with access to basic services such as social grants, housing, and health care. MPs also use constituency periods to report back to their constituents on parliamentary proceedings. MPs do this work at Constituency Offices, which serve as a direct link between elected officials and the public. When Parliament is in session, an administrator is sometimes available at the constituency offices to assist members of the public.

HOW ARE CONSTITUENCY OFFICES FUNDED?

Parliament funds Constituency work. Each political party with a seat in Parliament is entitled to a monthly allowance that is allocated to each MP to do constituency work at an assigned area or a constituency office.

INTERESTING FACTS

MPs are assigned constituencies by their political parties. Even though an office is linked to a political party, the public may visit any constituency office to raise an issue.

Every Monday is dedicated to constituency work. One-third of the annual parliamentary calendar, give or take, is dedicated to constituency work.

The purpose of constituency periods is to encourage MPs to remain in contact with the people they represent.

WHERE CAN YOU FIND YOUR NEAREST OFFICE?

Political parties are establishing and assigning members to offices. Our rep locator will be updated once this information is ready. In the meantime, you may reach out to the political parties directly at www.parliament.gov.za.

There are many constituency offices located across the country, where the public can approach elected representatives for assistance related to accessing basic services.

Each political party has their own modalities and approaches to constituency work. This impacts how many offices they set up, where to establish them, who to assign to a particular office and what types of service they provide to constituents.
