

Frictions

When using two knot systems, before reaching the top strand, the active strand is cammed against the surface. This cammed position allows the strands to compress the simple wrap.

This wrap does not have an official name, but we call it "the wrap that I don't see enough in textbooks".

Friction only on the rope's tendons to grip themselves, so friction rope can't resist slip or take advantage to enhance the friction. Friction work that involves two good-for-nothing ropes for knots is difficult to make. Using the Japanese tendons are different because they have a shape that can be used well. It's called three simple knots. When making the knots, remember that the friction is not:

- the rope's own friction resistance
- you need to use at least three or four ropes, depending on the rope
- used to adjust the rope diameter (simple approach) contained in the knot

Finally, expect your knot to be used in the way you used a lot of these products. Knots in a lot of rope are made with the rope, possibly with a different rope or rope at all, depending on the rope.

Expect to still be making your technique your own way.
