

First person language features

When you are discussing a piece of text that is presented in the first person, identifying the following features will help you decide on its genre:

Natural speech	Monologue	First person narrative
Spontaneous, usually non-fiction	Pre-planned, fictional or autobiographical speech of one speaker	Pre-planned, fictional or autobiographical writing
Informal, unscripted, unrepeated and transient	Imitates some features of natural speech e.g. idioms, colloquial language	Structured, usually to entertain the reader
Many non-fluency features, with errors, fillers and pauses etc.	More fluent, with errors omitted; fillers, pauses etc. used deliberately	Fluent, punctuated, paragraphed
Structure not always logical, with asides, backtracking etc.	Structured, usually with a surface meaning and subtext	Literary, with a plot, themes, imagery etc. to enhance meaning
Spoken and usually unrehearsed	Written, rehearsed and performed	Written and published to be read; a fixed text
Interaction with a specific listener, either in monologue form or as part of a dialogue	Attempts to influence a collective audience present at its performance	Controls the flow of information to the reader, who is influenced as the narrative is read

Now find an example of each of the three genres above and choose a short extract from it to work on, e.g.

1. A transcript of a conversation, either from a text book or one you have recorded and transcribed yourself.
2. A monologue, either in book form or one that has been performed and recorded, e.g. Alan Bennett's Talking Heads (fiction) and Telling Stories (autobiography).
3. A first person narrative novel, such as The Catcher in the Rye by J. D. Salinger or Small Island by Andrea Levy which presents the four main characters' first person narratives. An autobiography, such as The Life and Times of the Thunderbolt Kid by Bill Bryson.

For each of the texts you have chosen, find specific examples of the features above that help you link it to the appropriate genre.
