Gender and the Language of Illness Jonathan Charteris-Black, Clive Seale, 2010-07-07 Gender and the Language of Illness is based on the findings of a large number of interviews with people talking about their experiences of many different types of illness Their use of language shows the influences of gender social class and age and reveals conformity and resistance to gender stereotypes Women express negative feelings towards illness more confidently than men who are usually more hesitant about expressing a personal response Women tend to see illness as an opportunity for self transformation while men often distance themselves from the experience by pretending it is happening to someone else Women from a high social class are more critical of the health system and older women see themselves as authorities on illness and suffering However there is also resistance to stereotypes by higher class and younger men who redefine their gender identity by using feminine language and by treating illness as an opportunity to develop a new dynamic sense of self

Publisher Encyclopedia of Language & Linguistics E. K. Brown,2006 Sexed Texts Paul Baker,2008-07-01 Sexed Texts explores the complex role that language plays in the construction of sexuality and gender two concepts that are often discussed separately although in practice are closely intertwined The book draws on a range of theoretical perspectives and published research including performativity theory feminism queer studies psychoanalytical theory Marxism social constructionism and essentialism Illustrative examples are taken from written spoken internet non verbal visual media scripted and naturally occurring texts Some of the questions addressed in the book include how do people construct their own and other s gendered or sexual identities through the use of language What is the relationship between language and desire In what ways do language practices help to reflect and shape different gendered sexed discourses as normal problematic or contested Taking a broadly deconstructionist perspective the book progresses from examining what are seen as preferable or acceptable ways to express gender and sexuality moving towards more tolerated identities practices and desires and finally arriving at marginalized and tabooed forms The book locates sexuality and gender as socially constructed and therefore examines language use in terms of socio historical factors linking changing conceptualisations of identity discourse and desire to theories surrounding regulation globalisation new technologies marketisation and consumerism
