Properties of Matter

Introduction

Are you able to distinguish between two substances by touch?

- Why are cooking, clothes, and furniture grouped together?
- Why are diamonds, rubies and other gems grouped together?

What Are Physical Properties?

Look at the table in the picture below as shown in an illustration given to you and write properties.

If physical properties of substances that can be observed without changing the identity of the substance, then the properties of an object can be observed. For example, you can identify an object with colour, shape, size, or weight. In general, the properties of an object are determined by the properties of the particles that make up the matter of it.

Many of the physical properties of materials that make up objects can be observed. These properties include colour, hardness, magnetism, and the ability to conduct heat and electricity.

Some physical properties depend on how much of a material you have. In other words, a large amount of a material may have different properties from smaller amounts of the material. Other physical properties do not depend on how much of the material you have. They show that no matter how large or small a sample of material is, the particular property is always the same.

Learning Objectives

Identify the physical and chemical properties of substances and group them on the basis of their physical and chemical properties.

Learning Objectives
