
Tutorial 12. Cold Flow Simulation Inside an SI Engine

Introduction

The purpose of this tutorial is to illustrate the case setup and solution of the two dimensional, four stroke spark ignition (SI) engine with port injection.

SI engines are of extreme importance to the auto industry. The efficiency of an SI engine depends on several complicated processes including induction, mixture preparation, combustion, and exhaust flow. CFD analysis has been used extensively to improve each of these processes. This tutorial simulates the intake, compression, expansion, and exhaust processes without fuel combustion. Port injection is modeled and evaporation of fuel droplets is simulated. The interaction of the fuel spray with the intake valve is modeled through the wall film modeling features available in FLUENT.

This tutorial demonstrates how to do the following:

- Use of the In-Cylinder model for simulating reciprocating engines.
- Use general strategies for modeling valve opening and closing.
- Use of the Discrete Phase Model (DPM) for simulating port injection.
- Carry out solver setup and perform iterations.
- Examine the results.
- Display and create animation for droplet injection.

Prerequisites

This tutorial assumes that you have little experience with FLUENT but are familiar with the interface.

Problem Description

The IC engine simulation is probably one of the most interesting engineering problems in the field of computational fluid dynamics. Port injection is used for efficient air/fuel mixing and fuel distribution in multi-cylinder engines.

In this tutorial, you will consider a two dimensional engine with inlet and exit valves. The engine is running at 2000 rpm. The intake, compression, expansion and exhaust processes
