Health Data Pools Under European Data Protection and Competition Law Giulia Schneider, 2022-04-13 This book explores the emerging economic reality of health data pools from the perspective of European Union policy and law The contractual sharing of health data for research purposes is giving rise to a free movement of research data which is strongly encouraged at European policy level within the Digital Single Market Strategy However it has also a strong impact on data subjects fundamental right to data protection and smaller businesses and research entities ability to carry out research and compete in innovation markets Accordingly the work questions under which conditions health data sharing is lawful under European data protection and competition law For these purposes the work addresses the following sub questions i which is the emerging innovation paradigm in digital health research ii how are health data pools addressed at European policy level iii do European data protection and competition law promote health data driven innovation objectives and how iv which are the limits posed by the two frameworks to the free pooling of health data The underlying assumption of the work is that both branches of European Union law are key regulatory tools for the creation of a common European health data space as envisaged in the Commissions 2020 European strategy for data It thus demonstrates that both European data protection law as defined under the General Data Protection Regulation and European competition law and policy set research enabling regimes regarding health data provided specific normative conditions are met From a further perspective both regulatory frameworks place external limits to the freedom to share or not share research valuable data

Essay from the year 2019 in the subject Law Data protection grade N A language English abstract The goal of this article as stipulated by its title is to bring this complex notion to the understanding of every privacy stakeholder The protection of personal data has been a major preoccupation of the European legislators in recent years Apart from data protection being a fundamental Human Right it is worth noting that almost all the other fundamental Human Rights rely on personal data For instance if a person's personal data such as name address bank details and location falls into wrong hands as a result inappropriate data protection policies the damages may range from financial losses to bodily harm thus affecting the individual's right to property life et cetera It is for these reasons that the General Data Protection Regulation lays down conditions under which personal data must be processed grants a list of rights to data subjects and fixes very heavy fines that await defaulters Among the lawful grounds for processing personal data is the legitimate interest pursued by the controller This ground is mostly used by online marketing companies Considering that the GDPR gives no clear definition of legitimate interest this article provides a clear understanding of such interest the circumstances under which it may arise as well as a balancing exercise and guiding factors that would help in understanding whether the legitimate interest pursued by the controller actually overrides the fundamental rights and freedoms of the data subject a precondition for processing personal data under such grounds

The EU General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) Paul Voigt, Axel von dem Bussche, 2017-08-07 This book provides expert advice on the practical implementation of the European Union s General Data Protection Regulation GDPR and systematically analyses its various provisions Examples tables a checklist etc showcase the practical consequences of the new legislation The handbook examines the GDPR s scope of application the organizational and material requirements for data protection the rights of data subjects the role of the Supervisory Authorities enforcement and fines under the GDPR and national particularities In addition it supplies a brief outlook on the legal consequences for seminal data processing areas such as Cloud Computing Big Data and the Internet of Things Adopted in 2016 the General Data Protection Regulation will come into force in May 2018 It provides for numerous new and intensified data protection obligations as well as a significant increase in fines up to 20 million euros As a result not only companies located within the European Union will have to change their approach to data security due to the GDPR s broad transnational scope of application it will affect numerous companies worldwide

Recommendations on European Data Protection Certification, 2017 The General Data Protection Regulation EU 679 2016 GDPR 1 will be as of 25 May 2018 the main data protection legal framework in the EU directly applicable in all Member States repealing the Data Protection Directive 95 46 EC The Regulation provides for a harmonization of the legal data protection regime throughout the EU re enforces several principles and obligations of the Directive it repeals and adds new provisions including ones on data protection certification seals and marks Data protection certifications seals and marks have the potential to play a significant role in enabling data controllers to achieve and demonstrate compliance of their processing operations with GDPR provisions An additional function of certification in the context of the GDPR is to enhance transparency since certifications seals and marks allow data subjects to quickly assess the level of data protection of relevant products and services The objective of this report is to identify and analyse challenges and opportunities of data protection certification mechanisms including seals and marks as introduced by the GDPR focusing also on existing initiatives and voluntary schemes Certification as a conformity assessment activity against specified requirements is performed and attested by a third party These requirements are derived from technical standards or legislation as in the case of certification under GDPR where the secondary EU legislation provides the normative framework as a basis for the assessment requirements The outcome of a successful certification process is a certificate thus a document and or a seal that attests that the applicant organisation meets the requirements substantive and procedural specified in the certification scheme and provided in technical standards or legislation In the near future it is also possible that such requirements originating from GDPR provisions are also provided in technical standards Certification can be mandatory when a relevant obligation for certification is established in legislation or voluntary when such obligation is not legally imposed as in the case of GDPR certifications which rely on the decision of a data controller or a processor to submit oneself to the certification procedure Certification under GDPR is well linked to the newly introduced principle of accountability and appears to be limited to substantive requirements related only to GDPR provisions must concern specific processing operations and can only be pursued only by data controllers or data processors as they perform the personal data processing
