

"Howl" was written by Allen Ginsberg in 1955 and finished in 1956. The poem gained wide celebrity in the Beatnik culture of San Francisco. The poem's subtitle, "For Carl Solomon," dedicates the poem to his friend whom Ginsberg met in a mental institution. Some of Part I documents Solomon's struggle with insanity, while Part II is specifically dedicated to Solomon's life and tragedy.

Ginsberg wanted "Howl" to express the pent up frustration, artistic energy, and self-destruction of his generation, a generation that he felt was being suppressed by a dominant American culture that valued conformity over artistic license and opportunity. For a poet or the individual to howl, meant that that person was breaking from the habit of conformity to the virtues and ideals of American civilization and expressing a counter-cultural vision of free expression.

The title also expresses one of the major themes in the poem - that of madness. The artists of the Beat generation were like animals, instinctively wild and only allowed out at night into an underground scene of literature and jazz not accepted by more cultured members of society.

Ginsberg begins "Howl" by describing his subjects. This is arguably the most famous line in all of Ginsberg's poetry: "I saw the best minds of my generation destroyed by madness...." These "best minds" are Ginsberg's friends, literary associates, and acquaintances - all of those that would become associated with the Beat generation, and they are collectively the protagonists of the story that "Howl" attempts to tell in a broken, stream of consciousness style.

It is worth reflecting on why Ginsberg believed these people to be the "best minds" of his generation. These were still the "best minds" for Ginsberg because they were outside of the group think that characterized the domestic, militaristic, unthinking patriotism of the time. Their minds were not captured by America's hegemonic culture. They were able to think outside of these restraints and were,
