ABSTRACT

One of the hazardous pollutants of indoor air is volatile organic compounds (VOCs). These compounds are organic emissions from products used on daily basis. They include a variety of hazardous chemicals, and high levels of these organic compounds could mean serious health threat to humans that come in contact with them. In this study, the levels of indoor volatile organic compounds in some residential areas in Wukari, Taraba State, Nigeria were determined. Different locations/sites were mapped within Wukari Metropolis. These sites include; the Government Reserve Area (GRA), Mission Quarters, Students' Residence and the School Hostels. Automated TVOC metre was used in collecting the data. This equipment was allowed to boot properly and the readings were taken one after the other after 30 seconds each. The readings were taken in triplicates in all the residential buildings used within the Metropolis. The process was repeated after one month. The result shows that the total volatile organic compounds (TVOCs) in students' residential hostels ranges from 0.06 ± 0.04 to $0.23 \pm 0.06 \text{ mg/m}^3$ with hostel C1 having the least TVOCs while Hostel A3 has the highest TVOCs level. The result also shows that the TVOCs ranges from 0.02 ± 0.01 to $0.21 \pm 0.07 \text{ mg/m}^3$ in Federal University Wukari Staff Quarters with Junior staff quarters 1 having the least TVOCs whereas the junior staff quarters 2 has the highest level. The level of TVOCs in students' residence opposite Federal University Wukari ranges from 0.09 ± 0.0 to 0.14 mg/m^3 with Naya2 having the least TVOCs level while Oklahoma2 has the highest level. The range of TVOCs level in mission quarters Wukari was found to be 0.06 ± 0.03 to $0.14 \pm 0.05 \text{ mg/m}^3$ with Mission 4 has the least TVOCs while GRA1 has the highest level. The result for this study showed that there were low levels of total volatile organic compounds (TVOCs) in the residential buildings considered in this research. At such concentration, it can be said that health challenge(s) to this effect is a rare scenario. However, prolonged exposure to TVOCs at a particular dose can lead to chronic health challenges such as respiratory disease, neurological damage among others.
