

AP Biology Lab 3: Mitosis and Meiosis

1. Referring to the percentage of total cells in each phase of mitosis, determine which phase takes the longest for the cell to complete, and explain why. Sketch a pie graph of the percentage of cells in each phase to illustrate. Be sure to include a title and a key for your graph.

Interphase by far takes the longest time to complete. This is due to the fact that, during this phase, organelles are duplicated, the chromosome is duplicated, and enzymes and proteins are synthesized that are necessary for cell division.

2. What is the relationship between the processes of mitosis and cytokinesis?

Cytokinesis is part of Telophase in Mitosis. Mitosis is cell replication that produces two identical cells. In cytokinesis, the cell membrane is pinched, and the two cells separate.

3. Which of the following is significantly different between plant and animal cell mitosis?

C. cytokinesis, is significantly different between plant and animal cells in mitosis. In plant cells, a cell plate forms between the two cells, whereas animal cells form a cleavage furrow.

4. How does meiosis lead to genetic variability within in a population? Use S. fimbicola as an example.

Meiosis allows for genetic variability within a population through crossing over, the exchange of segments between chromatids in homologous chromosomes. S. fimbicola is commonly used to illustrate crossing over because, when we squash the sample, we can determine if crossing over has occurred or not by looking at the ratio of spores and how they are lined up. If the black and tan spores have not crossed over, then there is a 4:4 ratio, or four black spores and four tan.

5. How does this represent an adaptive advantage for organisms that reproduce sexually?

Genetic variability in organisms that reproduce sexually is an adaptive advantage that allows for a larger range of characteristics which helps the best or most favorable traits survive longer and reproduce more through natural selection. This means species as a whole can reproduce and maintain the most favorable traits that allow them to survive in the best way possible.

6. Define the following terms:

somatic cell-any cell in a multicellular organism EXCEPT a sperm or egg cell or any cell that develops into a sperm or egg
