

Investigative task chapter 7- smoking

Researcher John Lee conducted a cross-sectional study of 10000 people. It shows that the number of cigarettes smoked per adult per year and the rate of chronic lung disease (including heart disease) tend to be related. The 10,000 people that were surveyed are shown in the following table. The table is a generalisation of the relationship between cigarette consumption and CVD risk rates, and is not meant to represent any specific population. How would you use the results from this study?

The association between cigarette consumption and CVD appears to be a positive linear pattern and slope. The association between cigarette consumption per year and CVD mortality rate is also positive. In fact, people smoking at the equivalent of the rate of 100 cigarettes per year would have a CVD mortality rate of 1000. In fact, the rate of CVD mortality for the people who do not smoke is 0. This suggests that the more people smoke, the more likely they are to die.

When we consider the data, it appears that there is a positive linear relationship between cigarette consumption and CVD mortality rate. The relationship appears to be a positive linear relationship. In fact, the rate of CVD mortality for the people who do not smoke is 0. This suggests that the more people smoke, the more likely they are to die.
