Machinery protection systems

About API 670

- Prior to the early 1970s, many critical machines either had no vibration instrumentation at all, or used less capable methods such as casing velocity measurements.
- By the mid-1970s, vibration instrumentation based on proximity probe measurements was gaining acceptance in industry and many users were beginning to receive machinery with proximity probes already installed. However, there was wide variation in the types and configurations of systems being supplied.
- The first edition appeared in June 1976 and
