Arranged marriage.

In the past, Arranged marriage was very common, and still is in some countries in the world. Arranged marriage is when parents choose a spouse for their sons and daughters. According to Gagoomal (2009), "Arranged marriage is broadly defined as unions in which people other than the bride and groom, typically parents or other family members, play important or decisive roles in determining who marries whom." (p. 590). Asia and The Middle East follows this tradition and believe that marriage should come first then think about love. Some people believe in love at first sight, however, others believe that it takes time and patience to love someone and develop a relationship with them. Arranged marriage leaves their child with no choice but to marry the person they picked out for them. This may also be referred ...show more content...

India is the most common country that follows this tradition and is very serious about it. Arranged marriage is different than Traditional marriage in many ways. Traditional marriage is when a man chooses a woman for him, then speak to her parents and agree to meet up to discuss it together. In this condition, the lady had a right in the marriage; she can reject the man if she does not want to marry him. Traditional marriage does not force the lady to marry the man that proposed to her. In this case, they can get to know each other though a small period of time so she can make their decision if they want to marry each other. There are those who do not agree with neither Arranged marriage nor Traditional marriage. They believe that the man and the women should marry in love. Many people believe that arranged marriage is a good choice because it guarantees a spouse for them, it is more stable and secure than love marriage and leads to

Arranged Marriage Research Paper:

Arranged Marriage Péter Berta, 2023-03-17 Arranged Marriage shows how arranged marriage practices have been undergoing transformation how the gendered and intergenerational politics of agency consent and choice work in the contexts of partner choice and management of marriage and how this type of marriage can be reshaped reinvented and reinterpreted flexibly in response to individual family religious class ethnic and other desires needs and constraints

Indian Arranged Marriages Tulika Jaiswal, 2014-04-24 Despite the fact that more than 80% of cultures practice varying degrees of arranged marriage scholars have thus far concentrated exclusively on American and European cultures from choice marriages not yet fully exploring the psychology of arranged marriages India is a prominent South Asian nation that continues to retain the historical tradition of arranged marriages in the 21st century This book therefore provides a timely addition to marital research as it offers a comprehensive and systematic psychological examination on Indian arranged marriages This book explores the role of individual interactional contextual and cultural factors in predicting marital satisfaction in individuals who were in arranged marriages and living in India The discussion is drawn from a survey collecting data from individuals married through the arranged marriage system in India In light of this empirical study the book considers the cross cultural applicability of Western findings and proposes some key methodological and clinical considerations for examining marital relationships in Indian arranged marriages Providing useful much needed scholarly insight on arranged marriages and widening the research conceptualization of marriage this book will be of particular interest to scholars of Social Psychology Sociology Marital and Cross cultural studies

Gender and Justice in Multicultural Liberal States Monique Deveaux, 2006-11-30 Gender and Justice in Multicultural Liberal States explores the challenges that culturally plural liberal states face when they hold competing political commitments to cultural rights and sexual equality and advances an argument for resolving such dilemmas through democratic dialogue and negotiation Exploring recent examples of gendered cultural conflicts in South Africa Canada and Britain this book shows that there is an urgent need for workable strategies to mediate the antagonisms between the cultural practices and arrangements of certain ethno cultural and religious groups and the norms and constitutional rights endorsed by liberal states Yet such strategies will be successful only insofar as they can resolve conflicts without either reinforcing women's subordination within cultural communities or unjustly dismissing calls for cultural recognition and forms of self governance To this end the book develops an approach to mediating cultural tensions that takes seriously the demands of justice by cultural and religious minorities in liberal democratic states Grounded in an argument for democratic legitimacy this approach invokes norms of political inclusion and democratic dialogue and highlights negotiation and compromise as the best vehicles for arriving at resolutions to conflicts of cultural value However it also reconceives the basis of democratic legitimacy so as to include not merely formal expressions of political consent but also a range of non formal democratic activity that occur in the private and social
