S About Racism:

The Church-as-family and Ethnocentrism in Sub-Saharan Africa Gerald K. Tanye, 2010 Ethnocentrism is one of the greatest obstacles to peace on the African continent Taking the Church as Family of God as a model of evangelization this work explores means of inculturating the Gospel message in African cultures in order to transform them make them blossom and enable Africans to live as authentic Christians in their cultures It examines the values of African extended families and the prospects of interreligious dialogue as means through which the various religious bodies can effectively work together to overcome ethnocentrism and its evil effects and thus establish a wholesome African society where every human person is at home irrespective of family orientation or tribal background

ETHNIC MINORITIES and the MEDIA Simon Cottle, 2000-12-16 What are the latest developments in the production representation and reception of media output produced by for or about ethnic minorities What informs the questions media researchers ask and pursue when examining the mass media and ethnic minorities What are the principal forces of change currently shaping the field There are few media issues more pressing or potentially more consequential than the representation of ethnic minorities This authoritative text therefore brings together leading international researchers who have examined some of the latest processes of change and continuity informing the field of ethnic minorities and the media Numerous studies of race racism and the mass media have been conducted in the past However both the media landscape and the cultural field of ethnic minorities are fast changing and this book addresses the recent developments which have threatened to outpace our ability to map understand and intervene in processes of change Presented in an accessible style this book provides the reader with an overview of the very latest research findings and informed discussion It opens with an introductory essay which maps recent approaches to the field followed by substantive chapters which are structured thematically to address key processes of change such as media representations media production and cultures of identity language she chooses using gender neutral words to honor everyone who reads the book. Illustrator Aurélie Durand brings the stories and characters to life with kaleidoscopic vibrancy. After examining the concepts of social identity, race, ethnicity, and racism, learn about some of the ways people of different races have been oppressed: from indigenous Americans and Australians being sent to boarding school to be civilized, to a generation of Caribbean immigrants once welcomed to the UK being threatened with deportation by strict immigration laws. Find hope in stories of strength, love, joy, and revolution that are part of our history too, with such figures as the former slave Toussaint Louverture who led a rebellion against white planters that eventually led to Haiti's independence, and Yuri Kochiyama who, after spending time in an internment camp for Japanese Americans during WWII, dedicated her life to supporting political prisoners and advocating reparations for those wrongfully interned. Learn language and phrases to interrupt and disrupt racism. So when you hear a microaggression or racial slur, you'll know how to act next time. This book is written for EVERYONE who lives in this racialized society, including the young person who doesn't know how to speak up to the racist adults in their life, the kid who has lost themselves at times trying to fit into the dominant culture, the children who have been harmed physically and emotionally because no one stood up for them or they couldn't stand up for themselves, and also for their families, teachers, and administrators. With this book, be empowered to actively defy racism and xenophobia, to create a community, large and small, that truly honors everyone. African Transnational Mobility in China Roberto Castillo, 2020-12-29. Considering the African presence in China from an ethnographic and cultural studies perspective, this book offers a new way to theorise contemporary and future forms of transnational mobilities while expanding our understandings around the transformations happening in both China and Africa. The author develops an original argument and new theoretical insights about the significance of the African presence in Guangzhou and presents an invaluable case study for understanding particular modes of transnational mobility. More broadly, it challenges forms of representing and producing knowledge about subjects on the move and it transforms existing theorisations and critical understandings of mobility and its shaping power. Through an ethnographic approach, the book brings us closer to a number of practices, features, and objects that, while characterising the lives of Africans in Guangzhou, are also evidence of the interplay between individual aspirations and the structural constraints embedded in contemporary regimes of transnational mobility. Raising critical questions about ways of unbelonging in the precarious settings of neoliberal modernity and the future of African mobilities, this book will be of interest to scholars of transnational African and Chinese Studies. The Colorblind Screen Sarah E. Turner, 2014-04-04. The election of President Barack Obama signaled for many the realization of a post-racial America, a nation in which racism was no longer a defining social, cultural, and political issue. While many Americans espouse a colorblind racial ideology and publicly endorse the broad goals of integration and equal treatment without regard to race, in actuality, this attitude serves to reify and legitimize racism and protects racial privileges by denying and minimizing the effects of systematic and institutionalized racism In The Colorblind Screen the contributors examine television's role as the major discursive medium in the articulation and contestation of racialized identities in the United States While the dominant mode of televisual racialization has shifted to a colorblind ideology that foregrounds racial differences in order to celebrate multicultural assimilation the volume investigates how this practice denies the significant social economic and political realities and inequalities that continue to define race relations today Focusing on such iconic figures as President Obama LeBron James and Oprah Winfrey many chapters examine the ways in which race is read by television audiences and fans Other essays focus on how visual constructions of race in dramas like 24 Sleeper Cell and The Wanted continue to conflate Arab and Muslim identities in post 9 11 television The volume offers an important intervention in the study of the televisual representation of race engaging with multiple aspects of the mythologies developing around notions of a post racial America and the duplicitous discursive rationale offered by the ideology of colorblindness

Controlling Public Education Kathryn A. McDermott, 1999 Most Americans believe that local school districts are the only means by which citizens may exercise control over public education Kathryn McDermott argues to the contrary that existing local institutions are no longer sufficient for achieving either equity or democratic governance Not only is local control inequitable it also fails to live up to its reputation for guaranteeing public participation and citizen influence Drawing upon democratic theory and the results of field research in New Haven Connecticut and three suburbs McDermott contends that our educational system can be made more democratic by centralizing control over funding while decentralizing most authority over schools to the level of schools themselves while enacting public school choice controlled for racial balance To many people in Connecticut and elsewhere the tension between equal opportunity for all students and local control of public education seems impossible to resolve In 1996 the Connecticut Supreme Court ruled in Sheff v O'Neill that local control produces unconstitutional segregation of public schools Nearly all of the state's 169 towns operate their own public schools and like the towns they serve the schools are generally homogeneous with respect to race and socioeconomic class In the Sheff ruling the court declared that making school districts coterminous with town lines is the single most important factor contributing to the present concentration of racial and ethnic minorities in the Hartford public school system At the same time the court also acknowledged that the town based school system presently furthers the legitimate nonracial interests of permitting considerable local control and accountability in educational matters In Connecticut and elsewhere it has often seemed necessary to choose between local control and equity in public education and local control has almost always won McDermott argues that rather than seeing local control and equity as conflicting goals policymakers should regard them as equally important components of democracy in public education In her view a truly democratic system of education should both encourage citizen participation in school governance and contribute to the formation and maintenance of a social order in which equality of opportunity prevails over hierarchies of privilege Centralizing distribution of resources and using controlled choice to end racial isolation would provide greater equality of opportunity while decentralizing management of schools would expand citizen participation McDermott's conclusions break new ground in our understanding of local school governance itself and call into question the conventional wisdom about local participation These findings should interest those who study school governance and reform especially in an urban setting as well as policy makers administrators teachers students and citizens eager to improve their schools

Changing Urban Education Clarence Nathan Stone, 1998 With critical issues like desegregation and funding facing our schools dissatisfaction with public education has reached a new high Teachers decry inadequate resources while critics claim educators are more concerned with job security than effective teaching Though urban education has reached crisis proportions contending players have difficulty agreeing on a common program of action This book tells why Changing Urban Education confronts the prevailing naivete in school reform by examining the factors that shape reinforce or undermine reform efforts Edited by one of the nation's leading urban scholars it examines forces for change and resistance in urban education and proposes that the barrier to reform can only be overcome by understanding how schools fit into the broader political contexts of their cities Much of the problem with our schools lies with the reluctance of educators to recognize the profoundly political character of public education The contributors show how urban political contexts vary widely with factors like racial composition the role of the teachers union and relations between cities and surrounding metropolitan areas Presenting case studies of original field research in Baltimore Chicago Houston and six other urban areas they consider how resistance to desegregation and the concentration of the poor in central urban areas affect education and they suggest how cities can build support for reform through the involvement of business and other community players By demonstrating the complex interrelationship between urban education and politics this book shows schools to be not just places for educating children but also major employers and large spenders of tax dollars It also introduces the concept of civic capacity the ability of educators and non educators to work together on common goals and suggests that this key issue must be addressed before education can be improved Changing Urban Education makes it clear to educators that the outcome of reform efforts depends heavily on their political context as it reminds political scientists that education is a major part of the urban mix While its prognosis is not entirely optimistic it sets forth important guidelines that cannot be ignored if our schools are to successfully prepare children for the future
