Properties of Matter

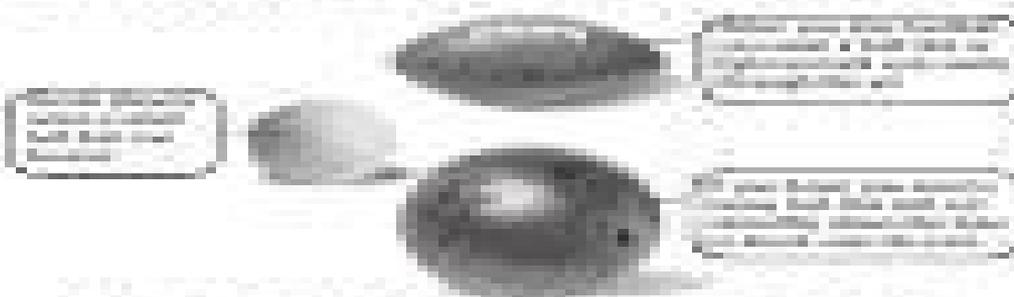

Properties of Matter

Objectives

- You will learn the scientific method and how to use it to solve problems.
- Why are matter, mass, volume, and density important properties?
- Why are temperature, boiling point, and melting point important properties?

What Are Physical Properties?

Start with the matter in the diagram below. It is made of a substance called hydrogen. It has certain properties.

Physical properties are characteristics that can be observed without changing the identity of the substance. Mass and volume are physical properties of an object because its mass and volume do not change when its shape, size, or state changes. Physical properties of an object are determined by the particles of the substance. The shape depends on it.

Many of the physical properties of materials that make up objects can be measured. These properties include density, boiling point, melting point, and the ability to conduct heat and electricity.

Some physical properties depend on how much of a material you have. In other words, a large amount of a material may have different properties than a smaller amount of the material. Other physical properties do not depend on how much of the material you have. They show that no matter how large or small something is, it has the same physical property or always the same

Learning Objectives

Students are expected to understand the physical properties of matter and how they change with temperature and state.

Learning Objectives

By the end of this lesson, students should be able to identify and describe the physical properties of matter.

Learning Objectives

By the end of this lesson, students should be able to identify and describe the physical properties of matter.
