T8.11 (a) State: We want to estimate the actual proportion of all visitors to Yellowstone who favor the restrictions at a 99% confidence level. Plan: We should use a one-sample z interval for p if the conditions are met. Random: The visitors were selected randomly. Normal: There were 89 success and 61 failures. Both are at least 10. Independent: The sample is less than 10% of the population of all visitors to Yellowstone. Do: a 99% confidence interval is given by

$$0.593 \pm 2.576 \sqrt{\frac{0.593(0.407)}{150}} = (0.490, 0.696).$$

Conclude: We are 99% confident that the interval from 0.490 to 0.696 captures the true proportion of all visitors who would say that they favor the restrictions. (b) The U.S. Forest Service cannot conclude that more than half of the visitors to Yellowstone National Park favor the proposal. It is plausible that only 49% favor the proposal.

T8.12 (a) Since the sample size is relatively large (larger than 30), the Normal condition is met.

(b) Maurice's interval uses a z* instead of a t*. This would be appropriate only if we knew the population standard deviation. Also, Maurice used a wrong value for the standard deviation and used n-1 in the denominator instead of n. The correct interval is (5.460, 6.956).

T8.13 State: We want to estimate the true mean number of bacteria per milliliter of raw milk μ for milk received at the factory at the 90% confidence level. Plan: We should construct a one-sample t interval for μ if the conditions are met. Random: The data come from a random sample. Normal: (Draw a graph) The graph indicates that there is no strong skewness or outliers. Independent: We have data from less than 10% of possible samples of milk received at the factory. The conditions are met. Do: We compute from the differences that $\bar{x} = 4950.0$ and $s = 268.5$, and we have a sample of $n=10$ observations. This means that we have 9 df and $t^* = 1.833$. The confidence interval, then, is

Conclude: We are 90% confident that the interval from 4794.4 to 5105.6 bacteria/ml captures the true mean number of bacteria in the milk received at the factory.
