

CHAPTER 19 PARTNERSHIPS: FORMATION AND OPERATION

Chapter Outline

1. Business organizations that are formed legally as partnerships, although they are not always so called in conversation, are governed throughout their entire existence by the legal, technical, and accounting principles.
 - a. Advantages of the partnership form include ease of creation and the absence of the double taxation often inherent in the creation and by a corporation structured as business.
 - b. Partnership taxation rules apply to a partnership and often combined with legal concepts regarding partnership property interests of the partners being fully participating with general partner.
 - c. Partnership legal forms have been created over the years to combine the benefits of corporations and partnerships such as S corporations, limited liability partnerships and limited liability companies.
2. Partnership accounting and the capital account
 - a. The historical aspects of partnership accounting center on the capital account maintained by each individual partner.
 - b. The issue of accounting for these capital interests in the context of partnership agreement, asset distribution procedure, the total partnership, withdrawal, admission of a new partner, retirement of a partner, etc.
 - c. The issue continues under the heading of the partners in the business should be treated as the capital asset in various ways. However, when a partner is not, through some act of particular agreement or an established legal form.
 - i. In the fixed method, the partner's equity are stated and recorded. The legal contribution of an individual is stated and the percentage of the total partnership being used is maintained.
 - ii. In the goodwill method, the amount being contributed and the corresponding percentage of the total capital interest are used to calculate the value of the business and the percentage goodwill of legal equity previously recorded as an original asset.
3. Partnership closing situation
 - a. At the end of each fiscal period, the receipts and disbursements should be stated and with the resulting financial figures being assigned to the individual capital accounts.
 - b. The method of allocating income to the capital accounts should be consistent with the nature of partnership.
