

Chapter 8 An Introduction to Metabolism

Lecture Outline

Overview: The Energy of Life

Concept 8.1 An organism's metabolism transforms matter and energy, subject to the laws of thermodynamics

- The totality of an organism's chemical reactions is called metabolism.
- Metabolism is an emergent property of life that arises from interactions between molecules within the orderly environment of the cell.

The chemistry of life is organized into metabolic pathways.

- Metabolic pathways begin with a specific molecule, which is then altered in a series of defined steps to form a specific product.
- A specific enzyme catalyzes each step of the pathway.
- Catabolic pathways release energy by breaking down complex molecules to simpler compounds.
  - A major pathway of catabolism is cellular respiration, in which the sugar glucose is broken down in the presence of oxygen to carbon dioxide and water.
- Anabolic pathways consume energy to build complicated molecules from simpler compounds. They are also called biosynthetic pathways.
  - The synthesis of protein from amino acids is an example of anabolism.
- The energy released by catabolic pathways can be stored and then used to drive anabolic pathways.
- Energy is fundamental to all metabolic processes, and therefore an understanding of energy is key to understanding how the living cell works.
  - Bioenergetics is the study of how organisms manage their energy resources.

Organisms transform energy.

- Energy is the capacity to do work.
  - Energy exists in various forms, and cells transform energy from one type into another.
- Kinetic energy is the energy associated with the relative motion of objects.
  - Objects in motion can perform work by imparting motion to other matter.
