Patti Hartigan traced his ancestry back to slavery and his plays echo with uncanny similarities to the history of his ancestors. She interviewed Wilson many times before his death and traces his life from his childhood in Pittsburgh where nine of the plays take place to Broadway. She also interviewed scores of friends, theater colleagues, and family members and conducted extensive research to tell the absorbing, richly detailed Chicago Tribune story of a writer who left an indelible imprint on American theater and opened the door for future playwrights of color. "Fences" Act II [videorecording]. August Wilson also known as Frederick August Kittel, 1983. The Dramatic Vision of August Wilson Sandra Garrett Shannon, 1995. In The Dramatic Vision of August Wilson Sandra Shannon follows the playwright's path through each decade. From the outset she considers how he uses poetry, the blues, Romare Bearden's art, and other cultural artifacts to lead him to imagined sites of pain and resignation, healing, and renewal in the collective memory of black America. It is in these places of defeat and victory Shannon demonstrates that Wilson creates drama as he excavates, examines, and reclaims the past. Although Wilson diverts attention away from factual details and focuses on the human costs of family dislocation, chronic unemployment, or cultural alienation, Shannon illustrates how fully the plays are grounded in credible historical contexts from slavery and Emancipation to the aftermath of World War II, the 1960s, and the Vietnam War. Moreover, she identifies and analyzes the themes that recur in some plays and branch off in new directions in others, including the dislocations that attended black migration to the North and communication gaps between black men and women. As she examines each of the plays in Wilson's dramatic history of the African American experience, Shannon conveys the broad range of his dramatic vision.
