

Review Problems – Chapter 2 – Fluid Statics

Problem 1:

Freshwater and seawater flowing in parallel horizontal pipelines are connected to each other by a double U-tube manometer, as shown in the figure. Determine the pressure difference between the two pipelines. Take the density of fresh water  $\rho_{fw} = 1000 \text{ kg/m}^3$ , the density of seawater at that location to be  $\rho_{sw} = 1035 \text{ kg/m}^3$ , density of mercury  $\rho_{Hg} = 13,600 \text{ kg/m}^3$  and density of air  $\rho_{air} = 1.2 \text{ kg/m}^3$ . Can the air column be ignored in the analysis?

Problem 2:

Two water tanks are connected to each other through a mercury manometer with inclined tubes, as shown in the figure. If the pressure difference between the two tanks is 20 kPa, calculate  $a$  and  $\theta$ .

Problem 3:

The two sides of a V-shaped water trough are hinged to each other at the bottom where they meet, as shown in the figure, making an angle of  $45^\circ$  with the ground from both sides. Each side is 0.75 m wide, and the two parts are held together by a cable and turnbuckle placed every 6 m along the length of the trough. Calculate the tension in each cable when the trough is filled to the rim.

Problem 4:

A 4-m-long quarter-circular gate of radius 3 m and of negligible weight is hinged about its upper edge A, as shown in the figure. The gate controls the flow of water over the ledge at B, where the gate is pressed by a spring. Determine the minimum spring force required to keep the gate closed when the water level rises to A at the upper edge of the gate.
