Computational Nonlinear Morphology George Anton Kiraz,2001-12-17 By the late 1970s phonologists and later morphologists had departed from a linear approach for describing morphophonological operations to a nonlinear one Computational models however remain faithful to the linear model making it very difficult if not impossible to implement the morphology of languages whose morphology is nonconcatanative Computational Nonlinear Morphology aims at presenting a computational system that counters the development in linguistics It provides a detailed computational analysis of the complex morphophonological phenomena found in Semitic languages based on linguistically motivated models
