

Strategy is the long-term direction of an organization. A strategy statement should cover the goals of an organization, the scope of the organization's activities and the advantages or capabilities the organization brings to these goals and activities.

Corporate-level strategy is concerned with an organization's overall scope; business-level strategy is concerned with how to compete; and operational strategy is concerned with how corporate- and business-level strategies are actually delivered.

The Exploring Strategy Model has three major elements: understanding the strategic position, making strategic choices for the future and managing strategy in action.

Strategy work is done by managers throughout an organization, as well as specialist strategic planners and strategy consultants.

Research on strategy context, content and process shows how the analytical perspectives of economics, sociology and psychology can all provide practical insights for approaching strategy issues.

Although the fundamentals of strategy may be similar, strategy varies by organizational context, for example small business, multinational or public sector.

Strategic issues are best seen from a variety of perspectives, as exemplified by the four strategy lenses of design, experience, variety and discourse.
