Stanislav And Christina Grof Beyond Death:

Beyond death. The gates of consciousness Stanislav Grof, 1976 The Agony and Ecstasy of Dying Charles Ignatius, 2019-08-13 Every one born on this planet has to die one day Death is something no human being can escape Death and dying are an inevitable part of human life Death is universal Every day thousands of people die in every country throughout the globe No one is promised a tomorrow The only thing we can count on is today and this moment Death crosses all barriers of religion ethnicity language color civilization and culture Death remains a grand mystery Throughout history every religion and every school of philosophy have attempted to explain this mystery It is something that touches the life of every man and woman binding the entire human race under the sky It catches the rich and the poor and throws the black and the white in the grave The powerful and the humble all leave this world eventually But the process of dying need not be painful as many imagine it to be The knowledge about death and dying and preparing oneself to accept it as a new form of life can make the experience of dying more graceful and peaceful The intervention of caregivers can play a vital role to make this happen
