Federal Register ,1979-09 A policy network analysis of the palm oil sector in Indonesia Pirard, R.,Rivoalen, C.,Lawry, S.,Pacheco, P.,Zrust, M.,2017-06-30 The palm oil sector has been targeted by NGOs for its alleged negative environmental and social impacts In this regard Indonesia represents a major challenge because it is home to some of the largest tropical forests in the world A recent wave of corporate sustainability commitments peaked with the New York Declaration on Forests in September 2014 which emerged amidst the development of other standards and initiatives toward sustainable palm oil production This process has made this field very complex especially in Indonesia The present study aims at clarifying the positions taken by the various stakeholders and assesses the level of political support and the functioning of policy networks Results from our Policy Network Analysis based on the survey of 59 institutions representing all types of stakeholders e g government corporate NGO at all levels international Indonesian and local show that standards and initiatives for sustainability have contrasting visibility and impact among stakeholders In this context RSPO stands as a reference with the efforts by the Government of Indonesia to promote its own standard with ISPO yet to gain traction While IPOP was a well appreciated initiative and a symbol of zero deforestation commitments opposition to it by the government and conflicting interests have resulted in its disbandment Overall the lack of progress for sustainable palm oil practices on the ground in the view of respondents seems to be caused by political and legal barriers rather than technical challenges or economic losses at a country level Global Shifts Philip Schleifer,2023-06-20 What global shifts in markets and power mean for the politics and governance of sustainability In recent years major shifts in global markets from North to South have created a new geography of trade and consumption particularly in the agricultural sector How this shift affects the governance of sustainability and thus the future of the planet is the pressing topic Philip Schleifer takes up in this book The processes of twenty first century globalization are fundamentally changing the politics and governance of commodity production Schleifer argues with profound implications for the environment in the food producing countries of the Global South At the center of Schleifer s study are Brazil and Indonesia two key sites of experimentation in new models of global environmental and commodity governance where palm oil and soy supply chains have seen unprecedented degrees of private environmental governance in recent years However instead of transforming these industries the diffusion of transnational sustainability standards has accompanied a worsening ecological crisis with mounting evidence of increasingly strong links between deforestation and globalization in twenty first century agricultural trade To uncover the causes of this governance failure Schleifer develops a multi level framework for analyzing how contemporary globalization is reconfiguring the political economies of such industries The result is the first comprehensive analysis of the shift of global agricultural trade to the South and the deepening crisis of commodity driven deforestation and a complex and evolving picture of both the risks and opportunities for sustainability presented by this transformative shift Assessing impacts on ecosystem services under various plausible oil palm expansion scenarios in Central Kalimantan, Indonesia Sharma, S.K., Baral, H., Pacheco, P., Laumonier, Y., 2017-06-05 Key messages The land use change caused by oil palm expansion results in adverse impacts on ecosystem functions and services provided by natural forests This study assesses the impacts of oil palm expansion on key ecosystem services and analyzes the trade offs among ecosystem services under four plausible future land use scenarios in Central Kalimantan Indonesia business as usual moratorium zero gross deforestation and sustainable intensification A trade off between carbon benefit and habitat quality was observed in the area with low carbon stock Providing some habitat quality in areas of oil palm expansion enhanced the carbon benefit A synergy between carbon sequestration and water yield was evident due to oil palm expansion on Dry Rice Land with Mixed Scrub under the zero gross deforestation scenario Among the four plausible LULC scenarios zero gross deforestation is the most desirable option for the study area in Central Kalimantan A successful implementation of zero gross deforestation requires a review of the forest moratorium to encompass all forest types a clear land use policy strategy and a detailed land use plan involving all jurisdictions and engagement of stakeholders Sustainable intensification is the second best land use and land cover option for oil palm expansion with an assumed average yield enhancement to 5 tCPO ha 1 yr 1 However enhancing yield in smallholder farms by 78% is highly challenging It may be achievable by providing appropriate and adequate technical and management supports to smallholder farms and by ensuring off take markets for oil palm produced by smallholders

Transnational Sustainability Laws Phillip Paiement, 2017-11-23 Transnational standards related to the environmental and social sustainability of production processes are becoming commonplace governance tools in the global economy This book demonstrates how sustainability standards serve two fundamentally different functions coordination and regulation Standards can coordinate like minded businesses in an industry by demarcating common sustainability commitments to distinguish between sustainable and unsustainable sectors of the industry Yet standards can also regulate businesses requiring them to change production and trade practices to align with the sustainability demands of third parties including trading partners advocacy groups consumers and other civil society constituencies These two functions reflect the private and public lenses respectively through which legal scholars can assess standards as transnational sustainability laws With key case studies in forestry standards palm oil standards and the ISEAL Alliance this book demonstrates how socio legal analyses of transnational rulemaking inform debates about global administrative law and the constitutionalization of the global economy
