ELECTROMAGNETIC EFFECTS

MAGNETIC FIELD DUE TO ELECTRIC CURRENT:

Magnetic field in a current carrying conductor (right hand screw rule):

1. A conductor carrying current creates magnetic field around it.
2. The strength of the magnetic field can be increased by increasing the current. In IGCSE course we are only interested in finding the direction of this magnetic field.
3. In order to determine the direction of the magnetic field around a current carrying conductor we apply right hand screw rule. According to this rule if a right-hand thumb held in a way that it is pointing towards the direction of the conventional current (means flow of positive charges from positive terminal to negative terminal of the battery), then the direction of rotation of the fingers gives the direction of the magnetic field (N-S) around the conductor.

Magnetic field due to solenoid (right hand grip rule):

1. Solenoid is a long cylindrical coil with number of turns. It produces magnetic field similar to that of a bar magnet.
2. In solenoid the direction of the magnetic field can be found by applying the right hand grip rule.
3. According to this rule if the fingers of the right hand grip the solenoid in the direction of the flow of conventional current, the thumb points towards the north pole.
4. Higher the number of turns or larger the current in the coil, it gives the stronger magnetic field.
5. Permanent magnets can be made by allowing molten ferromagnetic metals to solidify in such solenoid fields.
6. Relays and electric bells are the good example of use of magnetic field due to a current carrying conductor.

Relay:

Relay is an electrical device in which large current circuit can be operated by a low current dc circuit. Referring to the diagram, when the switch S is closed, the iron core inside the solenoid becomes magnetized. It attracts the iron armature, which is pivoted. The upper limb of the armature causes the contacts in the secondary circuit XY to close, thus activating that large circuit. The next figure shows the circuit symbol for relay. The NO is normally open relay and NC is normally closed relay.
