

Language Files 11th Edition Answer Key

PROVIDING

When we discuss the value of our students' responses, remembering that each individual is a unique language learner with unique abilities and needs, we can take their learning into account and provide a more effective and meaningful experience. The teacher should, first, acknowledge the student's response and then, if possible, provide a more effective response. This can be done by providing a more effective response.

Effective teaching is based on the teacher's ability to provide a more effective response. It is not the teacher's responsibility to provide a more effective response, but rather to provide a more effective response.

The teacher's role is to provide a more effective response. This can be done by providing a more effective response. The teacher should, first, acknowledge the student's response and then, if possible, provide a more effective response. This can be done by providing a more effective response.
