A Life in Balance? Catherine Krull,2011-02-28 Magazine articles talk shows and commercials advise us that our happiness and well being rest on striking a balance between work and family It goes unsaid however that the advice is based on an outmoded and unrealistic ideal This provocative volume challenges the notion often offered in support of neo liberal agendas that paid work employment and unpaid work caregiving and housework are separate and competing spheres rather than overlapping aspects of a single existence Alternative approaches to integrating work and family must be taken into account if we hope to build truly equitable family and childcare policies

Statistical

Research Methods in the Life Sciences Pejaver Vishwamber Rao,1998 Appropriate for all courses in statistical methods for the agricultural life health and environmental sciences this book offers a practical and modern approach that minimizes computation and emphasizes conceptual understanding Rao continually emphasizes issues and topics most relevant to modern day research in the life sciences For example point and interval estimation take priority over testing of statistical hypothesis and methods and guidelines for determination of sample size are indicated whenever possible Statistical Research

Methods in the Life Sciences also presents a self contained and complete discussion of each experimental situation considered In the two sample setting for example in addition to presenting the procedures under the usual analysis of variance assumption Rao also presents methods for checking the validity of the assumptions

Science Diplomacy and Neocolonialism: Lessons from the field with a view to the future Rana Dajani ,Tania Bosqui,Rasha Bayoumi ,Abdullah Awad,2025-11-06

For the past three decades scientists and policymakers in the Global South have practiced science diplomacy under neocolonial conditions Recent crises including the COVID 19 pandemic and Russia s invasion of Ukraine have further complicated science diplomacy on public health revealing the marginalisation of actors in the Global South Yet existing models practices and modes of engagement in the Global South may subvert and strategically navigate these neocolonial conditions How can these models be collated in a dynamic and flexible way such that knowledge gained through new experiences is used iteratively across contexts How can scientists increase multilateral interdisciplinary and transversal partnerships while navigating complex governmental and international structures For this special issue we call for papers that demonstrate innovative and flexible models for science diplomacy with a focus on public health and health promotion policies We aim to collect evidence across various aspects of public health research which demonstrates the practical role of science diplomacy in the Global South as well as the structural challenges faced on the ground While South America and Asia have received scholarly attention especially in incorporating decolonial thinking and heritage diplomacy less has been studied in the Middle East and Africa Moreover less has been done in framing science diplomacy in terms of neocolonialism in order for its root structure to be constructively challenged Areas to be covered may include but are not limited to building partnerships among stakeholders across the Global South to ensure practical implementation of public health research modes by which scientific research is grounded in local culture and context the role of stakeholders in furthering health promotion including governments the UN NGOs academia and the private sector case studies which balance the participation of researchers from the Global South with the representation of gender ethnicity and disability positioning researchers as protagonists irrespective of geographies and state hierarchies in the international system turning governments financial power in research into a force for the good rather than a tool of neocolonialism
