reason this lifestyle is gaining popularity is that more and more people are starting to realize the value we attach to items. The fact that most of us cannot separate our memories and emotions from material things is alarming. The amount of consumerism in the world is also at an all time high. People have always loved things but not as much as they do now that there is so much access thanks to technology. Minimalism allows someone to make their list of things they need to keep. You may still retain most of the stuff you have if you decide that you need them. No two people can have the same wants or needs. Whatever you think is trash could be relevant to someone else. The guiding principle here is to look within yourself and make a deliberate conscious decision on what you want to keep or throw away. For anyone that is wondering if this lifestyle is for them they need to ask themselves a few questions. Would I benefit from scaling down? Do I attach so much value to material possessions? Am I holding on to baggage that I need to let go? I am not saying that these are the only questions there are to be asked. Every person is attracted to the lifestyle because of different reasons. But they only become true minimalists if when they are free to focus on what they deem essential. Our Book Covers the Following Topics: Minimalism For Beginners, Minimalism digital minimalism, minimalism for families, minimalist living, minimalism home declutter your mind.
