

The Giver

Terms and Definitions

- Anagnorisis - the point in a story when a character, usually the protagonist, recognizes the true situation he or she is in; previously the person did not understand. Example: Oedipus' discovery that he actually has murdered his father and married his mother.
- Chiasm - a familiar word or phrase that is used so often that it is no longer fresh or meaningful, but stale. Example: All's well that ends well.
- Epiphany - a revelatory personal experience that leads to gaining insight into the self, other people, or the world. The experience may be important or trivial. Example: When the Three Wise Men realized that the Christ Child they go to see is Divine, they experienced an epiphany. Stephen Dedalus in A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man had an epiphany when he saw a bird and it was a turning point in his life.
- Euphemism - substituting a milder word or phrase for one that might be offensive or too harsh. Example: "passed away" for "dead"; "previously arrested" for "arrest"
- Fantasy - a work of fiction that does not represent the real world. It may include non-human, animal, or alien characters, magical settings, or impossible occurrences. Example: J.R.R. Tolkien's The Rings Trilogy
- Flashbacking - the use of hints or clues in a story to suggest what action is to come. Flashbacking is frequently used to create interest and build suspense.
- Inference - the act of drawing a conclusion that is not actually stated. For example, in The Pigeon, since John and Lorraine are writing a memorial epic about the incident with the Pigeon, we may infer that the Pigeon is now dead and the incident is important to them.
- Ironic - a subtle, sometimes humorous perception of inconsistency in which the significance of a statement or event is changed by its context. For example: the firehouse burned down.
  - Dramatic irony - the audience knows more about a character's situation than the character does, forming an ironic contrast from the character's expectations. The character's statements have one meaning for the character and a different meaning for the reader, who knows more than the character.
  - Structural irony - a naive hero whose view of the world differs from the author's and reader's. Structural irony flatters the reader's intelligence at the expense of the hero.
  - Verbal irony - a discrepancy between what is said and what is really meant, sarcasm. Example: calling a stupid man smart.
